PREFACE.

TO THE CLASS OF NINETY-FOUR.

The class secretary submits herewith the first Class Report, containing the usual statistics of the class, various records of the college course and information as to the present whereabouts of temporary members and special students, together with a list of post-office addresses.

The first Class Report is supposed to be published before the first Commencement after graduation. For the delay in the publication of this report, the secretary offers his apologies and the apologies of those members of the class who have so long neglected to send in their class lives. There are still five of the three hundred and seventy men who received the degree of A. B. in June 1894, and a much larger number of temporary members and special students, who have not been heard from. After sending repeated notices and even personal letters to these persons, the secretary has decided not to waste the class postage on them any longer. Their names are marked in the list of addresses with a dagger (†); anybody who can persuade any of them to send in their lives will confer a favor on the secretary and on the class. Until the delinquents show enough interest in the class to comply with so moderate a request, the secretary must assume that they do not care to receive the documents or communications relating to the class.

The attention of the class is called particularly to the statement of the class committee and of the treasurer. The amount of money subscribed by the class is piteously small, and many subscriptions are still unpaid. If the Class Day receipts had not been unusually large, the fund would not be suffice for the running expenses of the class. As it is, there will be a constant and heavy encroachment on the principal of the fund, unless it be increased by additional subscriptions and by prompt payments from all subscribers.

It is usual to make the announcement in the preface of the first report that the Class Cradle will be given to the first child born to a graduate of the class married after graduation. Applications for this distinction should be sent to the secretary at once.

Notices of meetings of the class on Commencement Day will appear in the Boston papers and the New York "Times."

The next report will be published probably in 1897, and later reports at intervals of five years thereafter. As the first report deals with the life of the members of the class during the four years of the college course, so these later reports deal with their subsequent careers. The secretary therefore welcomes communications from all members of the class, also any newspaper cuttings relating to '94 men, and especially notices of marriages, births and deaths. Notice of any changes of address should be given at once. The secretary will be obliged to anybody who will confirm or correct the doubtful addresses. A revised list will be sent to the class from time to time.

It is the duty of the secretary to act as a medium of communication for the class, and he will gladly answer, so far as he can, any requests for information about '94 men.

EDWARD KENNARD RAND,

Watertown, Mass.

* Classifications relating to religion are so arbitrary, not to say amusing, that a list is here appended of certain direct expressions of belief, taken from the class lives. This list may indicate, to some extent, the many-sidedness of Harvard speculation. It includes besides the statements of regular members of the class, the most noteworthy statements of temporary members or of special students associated with the class.

Statements.— "Can hardly say; believe in the teachings of Jesus Christ." "Not a church member; believe in the New Testament" "I am a sceptic" "Non-sectarian, yet a Theist." "As far as I am concerned, I go to the Congregational" "I am not superstitious" "I prefer Protestantism; believe in a Superior Being" "Positivism." "Hard telling." "Unitarian — unbeliever." "I attend church irregularly; I must say that I have not found the life at Harvard conducive to the formation of any particular dogmatic belief." "I believe in no creed and am not a religious man." "I like no creed; am a pantheist but not a materialist" "Believe in Prof. Royce's idealism." "Philosophic theism" "The Golden Rule" "Adler's Ethical Culture." "A church like Appleton Chapel." "Magna est veritas et praevalebit" "No particular religious belief; can stand anything that isn't radical" "Presbyterian, if they believe in conscience as the moral dictator." "Believe in no creed; belief rather ethical." "I believe in most of the principles set forth by Buddha." "I have only one superstition — namely that a load of empty barrels means rain." "Am a pessimist, atheist and cremationist."

"Regret having no better Profesors (sic) in some of them."

CRITICISMS AND SUGGESTIONS.

"What advantages do you think you ought to have found at Harvard which you have failed to find?"

Courses.— "Prescribed courses that are not farces." "Better teachers in the lower courses" (2); "in Spanish," "in Latin," "in German." "More constructive, less analytic criticism in the English department." "Assistants in English courses who know as much as their pupils" [a dangerous suggestion]. "Less work in the half-courses in English." "Advice as to selection of courses" (5).

New courses proposed.—Advanced course in botany; in systematic zoology and the study of animal habits; in journalism: in industrial work; in Celtic and Slavonic; a general introductory course in comparative philology; a course in the English Bible corresponding to English 2; a general course in astronomy (2); courses in architecture; a course on the current productions in art, music, and the drama.

New library (9); better ventilation in the reading rooms; better gymnasium (3); better dormitories (1); better baths, in gymnasium (4), in dormitories (3); more convenient grounds for tennis and scrub teams; better eating and drinking; better weather and boarding.

Social advantages; good fellowship among the students; less Harvard indifference (31); more intimate relation between instructors and students (8). "A greater development of independent thought." "More unity of feeling,— the Yale spirit." "More university life, less High School teaching." "Class feeling; the democracy that exists at Yale" (2). "Stronger religious sentiment." "A University Club, in which any student would be entitled to membership." "Not the place for the poor student." "A decent city to live in." "Filters on Fresh Pond water." "Less smoking." "Less snobbishness" (3). "I ought to have found the professors making better use of their knowledge for the good of students and of mankind." "I ought to have paid more attention to college life and athletics and less to books." "A free college spirit, less provincialism." "Closer scholarship." "Not enough freedom for a man who knows what special studies he wishes to take. The university does not compare in this respect with foreign universities or even with some colleges in this country." "Official tutor of high standing — a touch of the English system." "A spirit of co-operation, of interest among men in each other, and of willingness to take definite responsibility." "I have found no enthusiasm or inspiration; too much negative, not enough positive criticism." "A class secretary that would not ask impudent questions."

Waters; College Humor, H. B. Eddy; The Glee Club, H. F. Taylor. Apart from these toasts there were few set speeches. E. B. Hill played his Honor Sonata, and H. A. Frothingham sang songs and told stories.

CLASS FUND.

It is not with a feeling of entire satisfaction that the Class Committee presents its first report on the condition of the '94 Class Fund. A glance at the following tables is sufficient to show, not only that the Class has not subscribed a large amount, but that it has been decidedly careless about paying what has been subscribed. Had not the amount handed over by the Class Day Committee been exceptionally large, the total amount of the Fund would be entirely inadequate to meet the expenses of the Class. As it is, the amount is much smaller than it should be, considering the size of the Class. It is hoped that before another report is published a number of the present subscriptions may be increased, and the total number of subscribers raised to at least two hundred and seventy-five. Those subscribers who have not yet paid their first and second instalments, are urged to do so at once.

Two hundred and fifty-three men, including temporary members and special students, have subscribed in all $7,030.00, which is about one thousand dollars less than the average subscription of the last few years. The treasurer has also received the Class Day Committee balance of $1,908.62 and $0.65 from outside sources, making a total Fund of $8,939.27.

Of the total Fund, $4,166.27 has been paid in. The expenditures to date have amounted to $1.368.09. Of the remainder, $2,200.00 is at interest in three savings banks. The balance is subject to check for running expenses.

Of the first and second instalments, due respectively before commencement in '94 and '95, there still remains $978.00 unpaid. These overdue accounts should be settled at once. The longer they remain unpaid the harder they will be to pay.

Communications in regard to the Fund will be welcomed by the Committee. They should be addressed to the Treasurer, H. A. Cutler, in care of Douglass and Minton, 314 Broadway, N. Y. City.

POEM FOR THE JUNIOR DINNER.

THE APOTHEOSIS OF '94, IN THREE CANTOS.

I.

HELL.

In the bottomless pit of nethermost Hell
  A devil watched and waked,
While all around him in sulphurus smell
  The lost souls sat and baked.

He stood at the mouth of a passage dark
  Above whose hopeless door
Was graven in stone an heraldic mark,
  A shield, that on it bore

The likeness of three sombre volumes broad,
  Upon whose backs of brass
Was written in gold of an earth-wrung hoard
  The motto — Veritas.

The barrings of gateways on every side
  Stretched down the hallway lone,
While above each threshold and portal wide
  Stood numbers, hewn from stone.

The Lord Chamberlain stood in the first gateway
  And cried in accents clear,
"The Faculty meets in this room to-day.
  U. 5. Don't enter here."

One door bore the numerals Eighty-eight,
  Another Twenty-nine,
Adown the long length of this hall of fate
  The classes stretched in line.

Alone two great numbers of rubies red
  Above a silver door,
Announced that here dwelt, among shades of the dead,
  The Class of Ninety-four.

Across the broad gate there were stretched two oars,
A foot-ball neath them hung,
While on ball bats, scarred with Yalish wars,
A whiskey bottle swung.

The devil stood careless amidst the red hail
While Hell burned roaring hot,
When out of the sky, like a bright comet's tail,
A winged being shot.

"Hail, hail to thee, Lucifer, knave of knaves,"
The flying creature cried,
"I bring thee a word from the saint who stays
Th' eternal gates beside."

"Nay, tell me thy name," cried the fiend in awe;
The spirit said: "I've none.
I'm the only man in Ninety-four
That e'er to Heaven has gone.

"Did I tell thee my name, I should shame my class,
For I hear the river's flow
Outstretched upon green beds of cooling grass,
While they stifle here below."

The devil then glanced at the letter he bore,
'Twas from St. Peter's hand,
And said: "Ope wide the fast bound door
Of Ninety-four's brave band.

"For to-day, 'tis two hundred long earthly years
Since Cambridge saw them last;
Grant them a day of relief from fears
To talk of times long past."

The devil ran quickly and knocked full loud
On the gate of Ninety-four,
And soon at his summons a shady crowd
Streamed through the open door.

Then the spirit cried: "My scheme I'll tell;
Let Ninety-four men all
Meet in a spot twixt Heaven and Hell
Where I've hired a banquet hall.

"There shall we feast nobly and talk of times
And things that used to be;
We'll drink all the kinds of various wines,
And pass the liquor free.

"So I have arranged to meet all my friends,
And have a pleasant night,
We'll give our feasting and fun no ends
Until the dawning light."

The men heard his speech, they howled amain,
But in their boisterous glee,
Came stepping in slow but majestic train
The shade of George C. Lee.

"Now fellows," cried he, as he sharply rapped
His gavel on a stone,
"I really must ask you your joy to adopt
To a more moderate tone.

"The Faculty first we must humbly ask
If we can have this spread,
Then several men must be given the task
To see that we are fed.

"The Dean's not here, of course you all know,
He took an upward flight,
And left all the other Professors below
Consumed with envious spite."

Lee oped University door in sheol
And there a sight was seen
Of Professors all trying to keep themselves cool
With Prexy's chilling mien.

Charles Norton first rose with a countenance sad:
"Though many years I tell,
I've never seen buildings so utterly bad
As these we have here in Hell."

But then Channing said: "On just such a day
As this long years ago,
The old Pilgrim Fathers sailed gladly away
To lands of ice and snow.

"Oh! stood I but now in New England sleet
I'd strip me to the wind,
And sit in the snow, for Hell's burning seats
Have tortured me behind."

Yes, all of the Faculty's flower was there.
All, did I say, but one,
For empty stood the accustomed chair
Whence the good Dean had gone.

Thus read the inscription engraved on the chair
All decked with wild flower sprigs,
"He went to attempt bad charades elsewhere
Le Baron Russell Briggs."

The President harked to the student's plea
And said, "If you really can show
That Junior dinners exactly agree
With the spirit of this University
I think you all may go."

So forth they all trooped on bright pleasure bent,
But stopped along the road
To reach the sweet spot, on a good time intent;
They imbibed many drinks of all kinds as they went
And each assumed his load.

II.

PURGATORY.

There's a spot that lies nearly twixt Heaven and Hell,
Where the heat is not bad, and where sweet maidens dwell.
If it were not for ghosts, why no mortal could tell
The difference twixt it and earth.

The board had been spread in a deep paneled room
All heavy with flowers and lazy perfume,
While soft lamps shed golden their light through the gloom
On the scene of future mirth.

The table was weighted with brave meat and good,
On the sideboards stood mugs of ale drawn from the wood,
While at every one's place a champagne magnum stood
Near hosts of green and white glasses.

The Committee came first, they were led by George Lee,
Who wore a dress shroud, such as never could be
E'er washed in the tub of a Cambridge Chinee,
For 'twas white as the snow when it passes.

Louis A. E. H. Ahlers came next in the line;
He had curled his moustache into spitzen so fine
That his eyes couldn't shut, while his features benign,
Smiled loomingly down on the table.

Under one arm he carried "deutsch" blue books galore,
'Neath the other a monstrous deep beer mug he bore,
While one read on a card that his broad bosom wore,
"Take me home, when to walk I'm not able."

In this aged assembly appeared a young Ladd,
And the look on his sweet face was tender and sad,
For he heard that the Crimson had gone to the bad
Since he left editorial duty.

Then came arm in arm, with shrouds trailing behind,
And their Grecian-like bodies exposed to the wind,
Bob Homans and with him Dupee, they opined
That as they walked up they had conquered the mind
Of many a hellish girl beauty.

Then Kennedy brought up the van of the six;
For some minutes they waited, for stuck in the Styx
The electrics of Charon had got in a fix,
For the trolly had slipped its supporters.

But soon cried George Lee, "Do you hear that loud tread?
It reminds me of foot-ball in times long since dead;
As I live — yes—by Jove — why — I 'll swear by my head,
'Tis the sounding of great rushing Waters."

He rushed into the room, Waters did, with head down
And a couple of pig skins held under his gown,
While his brawny right shoulder in mark of renown
The 'Varsity H was adorning.

Then came bounding in Bond with an oar in each hand
And about his broad waist was a green and white band,
That was all he had on, for in Hell's heated land,
The rowing's exceedingly warming.

Then they all heard the noise of a sharp, ringing cry;
"Slide, slide for God's sake, Mr. Umpire you lie."
And with a whoop Lowell came in on the fly
And caught himself nobly onehanded.

After him came a score of good-looking young shades,
All chatting of ancient love conquests of maids,
They had won in the gloom of the Harvard Street glades,
Before Ninety-four had disbanded.

Then the toast-master entered the room in a huff,
For he'd long been preparing bright jokes and good guff,
But alas, in his haste, he'd forgotten the cuff
Where were written his cleverest hits.

A figure well known then pushed open the door,
Marshal Newall astride of a 'Varsity oar,
While one hand was still wet from the Elihu's gore
Whom he'd sent home from Springfield in bits.

With bat in hand Dickinson shortly appeared,
And his face was with hopes of new victories cheered,
Yet in anticipation his intellect feared
Because he was booked for a speech.

Then the class foot-ball captain, one Russell B. Beals,
Appears on the scene. His coat pocket conceals
The remarks he is going to make. Safe he feels
While he has his notes easy of reach.

Linsley Loring's appearance was greeted with yells,
And with pride every bosom in Nintey-four swells,
For who can forget how the other class shells
Never touched the tail end of our rudder.

For our crew and our foot-ball stood always to win,
We encouraged and helped them through thick and through thin,
When the Ninety-four class cheer was raised, at the din,
We could see our opponents all shudder.

Another great shouting then welcomed the sight
Of the great Eifel tower stupendous in height.
Then a chippy bird fluttered in, out from the night,
And was soon recognized as a Wrenn.

There were Kings, there were Earls, there were Bishops galore,
Sherwins, Thompsons and Blakes crowded in through the door,
All these and the forms of a multitude more —
Too many to set down with pen.

Yet two faces were missed from the jovial throng,
Men known to all Cambridge in story and song;
No one knew where Frank Bishop and Powers had gone,
They had drifted from fair Harvard's shore.

Yet though now departed for other strange climes,
The class drank to their memories at least sixteen times,
In the flowing red beakers of bubbling wines
They had loved in the evenings of yore.

Now those who had come were of frivolous mind,
Men now hove in sight of a different kind;
They were students, more commonly known as the grind,
They were wise, but their knowledge concealed.

For they entered the room with astonishing Noyes;
They had put up their books, and come out with the boys,
To taste with dear Horace the bibulous joys
That the ivy-wreathed wine cup revealed.

The Monthly stalked in with a dignified tread,
Patting poor mother Advocate's much older head,
Which has grown very grey from the life she has lead
With Frenchified stories of late.

Then the Lampoon bounced in with an Eddy of fun,
With a joke for each man, and a ponderous pun.
They were culled from the pages of Life one by one,
For Lampy no jokes can create.

So the party was gathered and in the head chair
Sat the King of the feast — and he raised high in air
A beaker of wine, shouting, "Well may ye fare,
Ye men of brave Ninety-four's glory."

Then the dinner began and midst fumes of the wine
The faces grew cheery, the cheeks 'gan to shine,
While every fresh draught of the soft Rhennish wine
Produced an additional story.

It was really quite late, very much after two,
When the dinner was done, and the speakers got through,
That a knock stopped the noise of the jovial crew
As they heard the sharp voice of their keeper.

"Come, gentlemen, come you must really return,
I'm waisting my coal keeping Hell on the burn
With none of you there to be done to a turn;
I must try to run this place cheaper."

Then the men looked around, and they thought of the place
Where they now must return after one day of grace,
When the man at the door slapped Beelzebub's face,
And quickly the portal he slammed.

They arose one and all, raised their hands, and then swore,
" We've ne'er had such a time in our whole life before.
If we ever go back to old Hell any more,
May we be eternally damned."

Then mounting the table, thus spoke George C. Lee:
" Better athletes than ours in the world cannot be;
Let us all journey silently o'er the cloud sea
To the gates of the Elihu's Heaven.

" If they wont leave the spot and change places with us
We'll turn them out straight, we've no time to discuss.
For we'll play them at foot-ball and mop up the dust
With the azure New Haven eleven."

III.

HEAVEN.

Then forth went the band of classmen,
And they flew to Heaven's gate
Where the great father Peter
Keeps his eternal state.
They passed him as he slumbered
And sought their Yalish foes.
Bidding them leave the pleasant land
And hie them to Inferno's strand
To taste them of Hell's woes.

Yale saw the great eleven,
Yale saw and turned to flee,
Yale left the breast of Heaven
And all its fair countree.
They looked not on the foemen.
They dreaded Water's might,
For near him stood in crimson rays
Full many men, whose eager gaze
Shone with the fire of fight.

The victory was bloodless,
And Ninety-four soon found
That Yale had left them places
In very pleasant ground.
So full of wine and conquest
They formed their jovial crew,
And though o'ercome by what he drank.
Now here, now there, a warrior sank,
They walked the city through.

This was the song they chanted —
Great is its fame for aye —
"Let Elihu's great warriors
Straight to Inferno hie.
Step down, step down, proud Yale men
To Hades' mournful vale."
All chanted thus, as through the town
They walked the golden streets adown
Singing, "To Hell with Yale."

Thus won they endless glory,
And in th' eternal sky
The Ninety-four men drink and sing
Forever and for aye.
All hail to ye brave warriors,
Ninety-four God save thee,
And when with weighty years increased
Our classmates spread another feast,
May I be there to see.

JOHN FARNUM BROWN.

Died May 13, 1894.

John Farnum Brown was born April 18, 1873, at Philadelphia, Penn.; he was the son of Thomas Wistar Brown and Mary Farnum. He attended the private school of H. H. Brown, Harvard, '76, and graduated from Haverford College in 1893. At Haverford he distinguished himself specially in the study of English literature, and was associate editor of the Haverfordian; he was also a member of the Phi Kappa Sigma Fraternity. In the fall of 1893 he was admitted to the senior class at Harvard and would have received his degree in June. He was drowned May 13, 1894, in Dorchester Bay, with W. S. Hockley '94, F. Whitall '94, E. S. Bach '95, and W. C. Trusdell, L. S. This was one of the saddest accidents that the college has ever known.

At a meeting of the Alpha Chapter of the Phi Kappa Sigma Fraternity, held at Haverford College May 17, resolutions were adopted on the death of John Farnum Brown and of Franklin Whitall.

At a meeting of the Class of '93, Haverford College, held in Philadelphia, May 24, the following resolutions were adopted:

Whereas, to the all-seeing Providence of our Heavenly Father it has seemed best to take from among us our beloved classmates John Farnum Brown and Franklin Whitall, and

Whereas, we, as their fellow-students at Haverford College, were especially near to them and thus can appreciate most fully the noble moral and mental traits which both possessed, and now feel all the more keenly the loss which all their friends sustain in the sudden ending of their lives so full of promise; therefore be it

Resolved, that we as a Class, take this means of expressing our heartfelt sympathy with the sorrowing families of those who were so recently the daily companions of our college life.

At a meeting of the Harvard Class of '94, it was resolved to send the following letter to Thomas Wistar Brown, father of John Farnum Brown, and to James Whitall, father of Franklin Whitall.

We write in behalf of the Class of 1894, Harvard University, to express our deepest sympathy for the sorrow that has come to you through the death of your son.

Although he had been a member of our University but a short time, he had by his manly and upright character made many friends. Knowing our own sorrow, we sympathize more truly with that greater sorrow which has come to you.

ERNEST FREDERIC HILL.

Died November 18, 1892.

Ernest Frederic Hill was born March 25, 1871, at Wakefield, Mass; he was the only son of Melvin Joseph Hill and Louise Elizabeth Mowry. He prepared for college at the Wakefield High School and the Cambridge Latin School. Soon after the beginning of his Junior year, he was taken ill and was removed to his home. He died November 18. At college Hill won many friends by his cordial yet unassuming ways. He was a member of the Pierian Sodality. He had intended after graduation to become a teacher.

At a meeting of the class held November 25, 1892, the following resolutions were passed:—

We, the members of the Class of 1894, desiring to express our sense of loss at the sudden death of our classmate Ernest Frederic Hill are

Resolved, That in the death of Ernest Frederic Hill we have lost a liberal, zealous and studious companion. By his gentle manners he won warm personal friends who will deeply mourn his loss. His memory will long be cherished by those who knew him.

Resolved, That a copy of these resolutions be sent to his parents, to whom we extend our deep sympathy.

GEORGE CABOT LEE, JR., President,
THOMAS JOHNSON CUSHING,
FRANKLIN ABBOTT DORMAN,
RUSSELL BOWDITCH BEALS,
Committee for the Junior Class.

FREDERICK BURNHAM HILLIARD.

Died October 18, 1893.

Frederick Burnham Hilliard was born September 22, 1872, at Kearsarge Village, N. H.; he was the son of Rev. Samuel Haven Hilliard and Alice Ann Johnstone. After entering Harvard from St. Paul's School, Concord, with honors, and giving much promise to all, he was suddenly attacked with tuberculosis; after a three years' struggle for life — spending part of this time on a ranch in Wyoming — he died in Boston, October 18, 1893. He was buried at Mt. Auburn, where many generations of his ancestors lie.

WILLIAM STEVENSON HOCKLEY.

Died May 13, 1894.

William Stevenson Hockley was born October 5, 1872, at Paris, France; he was the son of Thomas Hockley and Amelia Daniell. From 1873 to 1880 he lived in or near Philadelphia, Penn., attending the DeLancey School; from 1880 to 1890 much of his life was spent in Europe. At college he was a member of the St. Paul's Society and of the Institute of 1770. In 1892, owing to the deaths of his father and his uncle, he lost almost all his Sophomore year; he had made up his courses, however, and would have graduated with the class. He was drowned in Dorchester Bay, May 13, 1894.

At a meeting of the class it was resolved to send the following letter to Mrs. Amelia Daniell Hockley, mother of William Stevenson Hockley.

We write in behalf of the Class of 1894, Harvard University, to express our deepest sympathy for the sorrow that has come to you through the death of your son.

During the four years of his college life your son made many friends here; we feel that in him we have lost a man who would have brought honor to his class and to his university. Knowing our own loss we appreciate how inadequate is this expression of our sympathy for you in your great sorrow.

For the Class,

GEORGE CABOT LEE, JR., President,
JOSEPH FRAILEY SMITH,
FRANK TRACY GRISWOLD,
LEDYARD HECKSCHER.

WILLIAM HOWE NELSON.

Died February 14, 1891.

William Howe Nelson was born June 14, 1871, at West Springfield, Mass.; he was the son of Charles Alvin Nelson and Lavilla Maria Howe. He prepared for college at Springfield High School and at William Penn Charter School, Philadelphia; though at the latter school only half a year, he at once took a prominent part in athletics and was chosen valedictorian of the class. Here, as well as at College, he was special correspondent for the Springfield Union and the Springfield Republican. He was working his way through college. At the end of the first term of his Freshman year he was taken ill with pneumonia, and never left his college room. He died February 14, 1891. In him the class has always an example of fidelity to ideals and of that success which includes the seeming failure.

Funeral services were held at St. Paul's Church, Springfield, by the Rev. Marion Crosley and the Rev. J. L. R. Trask. A quartet composed of R. I. Trask '94 and Messrs. Morris, Chapin and Spellman sang "Lead Kindly Light," "Nearer My God to Thee," and "God is Love." A. W. Gifford '94 was one of the pall-bearers.

At a meeting of the class held February 19, the following resolutions were adopted: —

Inasmuch as in the providence of God, William Howe Nelson has been called from among us, we the members of the class of 1894 of Harvard College are

Resolved, That a classmate of noble character, superior ability, and great promise has passed away, and that in his death we have suffered an irreparable loss and are

Resolved, That as an expression of our sympathy and sorrow, a copy of these resolutions be sent to his family.

GEORGE CABOT LEE, JR., President,

DANIEL WALLACE SHEA.

Died December 29, 1894.

Daniel Wallace Shea was born March 24, 1871, at Boston, Mass.; he was the son of John Shea and Julia Anne Murphy. He prepared for college at the Boston Latin School, at the English High School and with a private tutor. At college he made many friends and was very prominent in athletics. He won many prizes in track athletics and boxing, rowed on his Freshman crew, was substitute on the victorious eleven of '91, and played left tackle on his Freshman eleven; he and Adelbert Shaw played side by side in the rush line. He was a member of the Institute of 1770, the Δ. Κ. Ε., and the Polo Club. In the middle of his Junior year he left college on account of illness and after that time was never in good health. After traveling abroad for some time he went into business with his father. He died December 29, 1894.

Through his unaffected kindliness, his open-hearted good nature, he had endeared himself to many. By his death his friends have lost a companion attractive in many ways; his class and his college have lost a loyal supporter.

ADELBERT SHAW.

Died April 6, 1891.

Adelbert Shaw was born January 27, 1870, at Fishkill, N. Y.; he was the son of George Reed Shaw and Susan Wilcox. At an early age he desired to fit himself for the law, and after leaving the village school at Fishkill, entered the office of Mr. J. Hervey Cook. From 1888 to 1890 he studied in the Genessee Wesleyan Seminary at Lima, N. Y., graduating with the first honors in a large class, and in the fall of 1890 he entered Harvard as a special student. There he was successful in everything that he undertook. He played on his Freshman eleven, was substitute on the varsity, and would probably have played left guard against Yale, had he not injured his hand shortly before the game. He also was rowing with the varsity crew, and promised to be one of the best oars at college. Before coming to college, he had neither played foot-ball nor rowed. In scholarship, as well, his ability and perfect modesty won the respect of all his teachers. Above all, his manly character, his unfeigned goodness have, as the class lives show, influenced more than one of his friends for the better.

The circumstances of his death are as mysterious as they are sad. He started from the boat-house in a single, while the crew was taking its usual exercise. Just before reaching the Western Avenue bridge, he lost control of the boat and was immediately upset. He was about mid-stream at the time, where the river is less than a hundred feet wide and eight feet deep. He was a swimmer of great strength, and if he had had the use of his natural powers, could easily have reached the shore, or at least clung to the boat until help came. He was perhaps held for some time by the foot-straps, and when at last he rose, he could only struggle weakly for a minute and then sink again.

Funeral services were held April 10 at the house of his father, by the Rev. Mr. Skinner of the Methodist Church assisted by other clergymen of the town. Among the pall-bearers were Charles Orlando Jenkins '94, and Thomas Nelson Perkins '91, Captain of the 'Varsity Crew. At the same time memorial services were held at the college chapel. The Rev.

Phillips Brooks offered prayer and the Rev. F. G. Peabody spoke of the life and character of Shaw. The college choir, assisted by J. D. Merrill, sang "Abide with Me," "Angels of Jesus," and "He Giveth His Beloved Sleep." Almost all the members of the University were present at this service.

Among the many letters of sympathy sent to Mr. and Mrs. Shaw were those of President Eliot, Professors Briggs, Peabody and Moore, and Mr. H. B. Lathrop. At a mass meeting of the students, held in Holden Chapel, it was voted to send the following letter.

Mr. George R. Shaw — Dear Sir: We who were intimate friends and admirers of your son Adelbert, want to express to you and your family the deep grief felt by the University on account of his untimely death.

He came among us as an entire stranger, yet in these few months he has become known to us all. He immediately entered into our work and our interests with that vigor, determination and perfect strength which always characterized him. We first admired his courage and perseverance on the foot-ball field. These qualities, with quick intelligence and extraordinary zeal in his college work, gave him one of the foremost places in his class as a student. Whole-souled, sunny tempered and manly, he won the hearts of all. From admirers we became his friends. We felt sure that while he was here he would strengthen and elevate our student life and that when he left us he would reflect credit on Harvard.

The loss of such a noble character casts a shadow over the whole University, and makes us sympathize with your grief more than this letter can express.

For the University,

P. D. Trafford, L. S.,
T. Nelson Perkins, '91,
A. J. Cumnock, '91,
Neal Rantoul, '91,
B. W. Trafford, '93.

At a meeting of the class held April 9, the following resolutions were adopted: —

In behalf of the class of 1894 we wish to express our deep and heartfelt sorrow at the sad death of our classmate Adelbert Shaw. We feel that in him we have lost a man possessing the brightest qualities of the college student. During the short time he was with us he won the admiration of all by his frank and pleasant nature, setting us all an example in every branch of college life. We know that all we can say is inadequate to express our feelings towards a man who ranked among the first in studies and also filled such an important position in athletics.
